INFORMATION PUBLICATIONS

In order to inform the public of Community activities and decisions, the Commission issues, through its Directorate-General for Information and its information offices in the various countries, periodical publications (magazines, information bulletins, series of documentary pamphlets) brochures dealing with general or specific and topical subjects, and large and small maps.

These documents are published by the Commission in Brussels in the official languages of the Communities (German, French, Italian and Dutch) and English, Greek, Spanish, and Turkish, or by its information offices in the languages of the countries concerned (see addresses below).

Readers wishing to obtain documentation are requested to apply preferably to the offices in the country in question.

The range of publications being so vast this catalogue provides detailed information only on periodical publications (complete lists of the contents of certain series of documents since they first appeared) and on brochures or documentation material of major importance.

attack
30 p.

Ferrite content of 18/8 steels and their intercrystalline
corrosion resistance
26 p.

Comparative study of different corrosion control methods
based on the principles of electrochemistry
34 p.

Corrosion of steels and stainless steels in water or water vapour at an elevated temperature. Mechanism and effect of certain metallurgical and mechanical factors (surface treatment)
22 p.

Local corrosion of stainless steels
38 p.

Working Party IV -- Stress and strain caused by chemical attack
- Practical studies -

Behaviour of steels subject to corrosion by hot gases, combustion products and smelting
18 p.

Modern electrochemical theories as applied to the study of practical problems of corrosion in aqueous media.
26 p.

Choice of materials subject to extreme chemical attack - Critical studies on the value of laboratory tests, service tests and corrosion tables for the choice of materials
